CINCINNATI, Feb. 12, 1861 At three P. M. the suburbs of Cincinnati became visible, and toe train slackened its speed to get safely through the thick crowds on each size of the track in

All honor to the Queen City of the West. A more mag nificent ovation than that extended by her this afternoon to the President elect was nover witnessed west of the Alleghanies. It was not the military pageantry, not the stateliness of civil dignitaries, nor any other formal display, that made the occasion a perfect success, but the cous turn out of at least a hundred thousand prople, comprising all classes, from the rich merchant and nfacturer down to the humblest day laborer, to do honor to the man that will be called upon to save the Union by upholding the federal constitution and in wa. That this sontiment pervaded the dense masses that blocked up the public thoroughfures through which th procession passed for many miles, was plainly demon rated by the tenor of the shouts that greeted the hero of the ay on all sides. The train arrived at the appointed time at the foot of Fifth street, which was literally blocked with people. The locomotive was once compelled to stop. The crowd was so great it was impossible to get out of the way at the depct, and it was found necessary to bring the military and police force into requisition to clear it away. The reception was an era in the history of Cincinnati.

The weather was mild and beautiful. The streets were crowded with citizens and people from this and the neighporing States. The streets through which the process passed were crowded at an early hour, and the windows filled with ladies. The Burnet House, where the Presidential party stop, was handsomely decorated, and every arrangement made for the comfort of the distinguished The stars and stripes were flying from all the oublic and a number of private buildings.

At half-past two the military, which made a fine display, and the Committee of Arrangements were at the ndianapolic and Cincinnati Railroad depot.

On the arrival of the train, Mayor Bishop introduced and welcomed the President elect At Cincinnati, Mr. Lincoln took e seat in a barouche drawn by six white horses, amid the deafening cheers of a vast concourse of people. The procession, in charge of Miles Greenwood, ook up its march, passing through the principal streets amid the cheers of men and waving of flags and handkerchiefs by the ladies, to the Burnet House, where it arrived at 5.15, which Mr. Lincoln entered amid deufening cheers-Mento's band playing "Hail Columbia" and Star Spangled Banner."

After a few moments' rest Mr. Lincoln made his ap-pearance on the balcony, accompanied by Mayor Bishop, who made a short introductory address. Mr. Lincoln then spoke. He said:-

ANOTHER SPEECH BY MR. LINCOLN. I have spoken but once before this in Cincinnati. That was a year previous to the late Presidential election. On that occasion, in a playful manner, but with sincere words, I addressed much of what I said to the Ken tuckians. I gave my opinion that we, as republicans, would ultimately beat them as democrats, but that they could postpone that result longer by nominating Senator Douglas for the Presidency than they could in any other way. They did not in any true sense of the word, nominate Mr. Douglas, and the result has come certainly as soon as ever I expected. I also told them how I expected they uld be treated after they should have been beaten and I now wish to call their attention to what I then said upon that subject. I then said :-- "When we do as w say, beat you, you perhaps want to know what we will do with you. I will tell you, as far as I am authorized to speak for the opposition, what we mean to do with We mean to treat you as near as we possibly can, as Washington, Jefferson and Madison treated We mean to leave you alone, and in no y to interfere with your institutions; to abide by al and every compromise of the constitution; and in a word to the original proposition, to treat you so far as degenerate men, if we have degenerated. may, according to the example of those noble fathers, Washington, Jefferson and Madison. In passing to his room, those that could, rushed at him throwing their arms around him, patting him on the back, and almost wrenching his arms off. Politicians were thick; among them George N. Sanders and others. Although the multitude that had congregated at the depot and in the streets to greet the great Rail Splitter was immense, much less inconvenience was experienced by Mr. Lincoin in the transit to the hotel than last night The arrangements of the various committees of reception were excellent. From the moment they were received at their apartments at the Burnet House, they enjoyed all desired privacy. Policemen were guarding every stairway, and successfully expelled the incessant inroads attempted by the curious. Tens of thousands invaded the hotel in the course of the evening.

Mr. Lincoln and family observed strict retirement until after supper, which was served up to them privately at eight P. M. Mr. Lincoln repaired to the large dining room of the hotel, and has been exchanging salutations ever since with a steady throng of persons of both sexes and representatives of all parties. Fashion, beauty, wealth and intelligence all appeared to render homage the plain, unreserved Illinoisian.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR MR. LINCOLN'S RE-CEPTION AT ALBANY. ALBANY, Feb. 12, 1861.

The joint committee to entertain the President elect held a meeting this afternoon in the Executive chamber. Gevernor Morgan appeared before them, and insisted that he should be his guest whilst here, the State to pay the troduced to him in the Executive chamber, after which he should retire to the Governor's private residence, and vernor should select.

This absurd proposition came very near kicking up row in the committee. The Governor was also anxious that the committee should meet Mr. Lincoln at Utics, and be would ride in the carriage with him to the Capitol. After wranging some time over the plan they adjourn ed until to-morrow morning.

There is a large amount of buttonholing to night with nator Forry is doing all that he can to have that plan adopten; but others, including Mr. Bergen, declare that theywill not play second fiddle to the Governor in any such arrangement, stating that they will resign first.

Mr. Bergen, in connection with several other member of the committee, have proposed the following plan to submit to the committee to-morrow, which it is now thought will be adopted.—The joint committee of either at Utica or Buffalo, and conduct him to Albany, to be met at the stationby the President of the Senate and Speaker of the Assembly, and the Chairman of the joint commit-tee to eccepy the carriage with the President elect, the balance of the committee to follow in the next carriage.
Upon the arrival at the Capitot he will be introduced by Lieutenant Governor to the Governor, who will welcome him to the Capitol of the State. He will then be taken to the Senate Chamber by the Lieutenant Governor body, who will welcome him. He will then be taken by the Speaker and committee to the Assembly Chamber introduced and welcomed by them. The Governor having kindly offered his chamber, he will be taken there, and introduced to the Mayor and Common Council of the city of Albany, after which he will receive as many of his fellow citizens as choose to call.

At six o'clock he will leave the Executive chamber and proceed to apartments provided by the Legislature, where he will receive such fadies as will be pleased to

IMPORTANT SPEECH OF MR. LINCOLN AT INDIANAPOLIS.

The following speech, delivered by the President elect at 5:30 P. M., from the balcony of the Bates House, to an assemblage of at least over twenty thousand people, is of the greatest significance, although it deals more in intimations than in definite assertions. The fact that it was carefully prepared in Springfield, and brought here in manuscript, fully shows the meaning the Prosidential speaker intended to give it. He said:—

speaker intended to give it. He said:— Figliow Cruzers of the State of Indiana—I am here to thank you much for this magnificent welcome, and still more for the very generous support given by your State te that political cause which I think is the true and just cause of the whole country and the whole world. Solomon says, "There is a time to keep silence;" and when men wrangle by the mouth with no certainty that they mean the same thing while using the same word, it perhaps were as well if they would keep silence. The words "courtion" and "invasion" are much used in mean the same thing while using the same word, it perhaps were as well if they would keep sileace. The words "coercion" and "invasion" are much used in these days, and often with some temper and hot oloot. Let us make sure, if we can, that we do not misuaderstand the meaning of those who use them. Let us get the exact definitions of these words, not from dictionaries, but from the mon themsolves, who certainly deprecate the things they would represent by the use of the words. What, then, is "coercion?" What is "invasion? What is "invasion? What is "invasion? What is "invasion? I certainly think it would be "coercion?" also if the South Carolina, without the consent of her people, and with heatile intent towards them, be invasion? I certainly think it would be "coercion" also if the South Carolina is were forced to submit. But if the United States should merely hold and retake to one forta and other property, and collect the duties on forcing importations, or even subhold the matching there is the things be "furnision" or "coercin?" Do our professed lovers of the Union, but who spitefully resolve that they will resist coercion and invasion, understand that such things as these on the part of the Union & Sates the States would be coercion or invasion of a state? If so, their idea of means to preserve the object of the United States would be coercion or invasion of a state? If so, their idea of means to preserve the object of the Union as a family relation, would seem to be exceedingly thin and airy. If sick, the little pills of the homeopathet would be much too large for it to swallow. In their rengement, to be maintained on passional attraction. By the way, in what consists the special sacredness of a State to speak not of the position assigned to a State in the Union with it. I speak of that assumed primary right of a State to rule all which is less than itself, and to ruin all which is less than itself, and to ruin all which is less than itself, and to ruin all which is less than itself, and to ruin all which

Signorina Elena, made her first appearance before a Brooklyn audience in the "Lucrezia" last night. Although her voice betrayed some slight traces of her recent indisposition, her performance of this difficult role was a decided success. Mile. Klena possesses dranatic intelligence of a very high order, and heracting throughout was natural, impassioned and dignified. Her voice is a fine, full, rich soprano, of extensive range, and s highly sympathetic in quality. In the opening aria, Com'e belle, she at once convinced her audience of her powers as a musician, the purity of her method and her powers as a musician, the purity of her method and her capability of overcoming the most fermidable executive difficulties. In the three grand acones of the opera, in which Grisi made her most effective points, she displayed considerable tragle power, and reminded us, in many respects, of that great artist's peculiarities. The beautiful aris in the last act, M'ori, ah' m'ori, was admirably delivered, a chromatic passage of two octaves introduced in it being remarkable for its perfection of intenation and artistic finish. Both at the end of the first act and at the circe of the opera Mile Elema was called before the curtain and warmly applanded and bouquetted. She fully deserved the honors that she carned, for she is a genuine artist, without affectation or trickery, and i reseases gifts which will yet carry her to a high point of favor with our public. Of the performance of the other singers—Miss Philipe, Steffant and Susini—it is not necessary for us to speak, having so recently noticed them in the same cast. On the whole the opera was much better austained than on its representation at the New York Academy on Thursday week.

On Friday the "Sonnamboia" will be given in Brooklyn, with Oolson, Brignoli and Susini in the principal parts. On Saturday there will be a grand gain matinee at the New York Academy, when Verdi's chef d'answer, "Un Baile in Maschera," will be produced.

COUNTING THE VOTE TO-DAY.

Electoral Vote for President and Vice President-Ceremony of the Counting of the Votes by Congress-Instances in which Publie Attention has been Drawn to It -interest Associated with the Ceremony Fo-day,

It is not often that both houses of Congress resolve selves into one convention. But to day the Senate and the House of Representatives will convene together according to law, for the purpose of assisting in counting the electoral votes given at the last election for Presiden and Vice President of the United States. This is the last act previous to inauguration. The ceremony is short and

The Senators, preceded by their President, Secretary and Sergeant at Arms, enter the hall of the House of Representatives, where they are respectfully received by the members, who rise on their approach, and remain standing until the Senators are seated. The Presi dent of the Senate repairs to the Speaker's chair and the Speaker of the House occupies a seat at his left. The presiding officer appoints two tellers, who immedi ately take up their position at the Clerk's desk. Their the opening of the certificates begins, and the electoral votes are counted-commencing with Maine, and proceeding in the same manner, each teller officiating after nately until the electoral certificates of all the States are read. Two hours at the furthest, and the work is comple ed; and then, if everything is found to be in accordance with the prescribed form, the Presitent formally de clares that the chosen candidates, having received greatest number of votes, and that number being a ma jority of the whole number of Electors, are duly elected President and Vice President for four years, commencing with the ersuing 4th of March. The Senators then retire to their own chamber, the Representatives standing as they depart. The House appoints a committee of tw and the Senate a committee of one-to wait upon the Pre sident and Vice President elect and officially inform them of their election. Thus is ended a coremony which is usually regarded with very little interest—as a mere matter of form—for the decision of the people is gene rally known with sufficient certainty soon after the popu ar election. But there have been occasions in our his tory when public attention was directed to the ceremony and as the present unhappy condition of the country wil naturally attract the eyes of all to the scene of the count ing of the votes to-day, it will be instructive to recall the other instances in which the ceremony attracted the at

On the 13th of Sentember, 1788, after a sufficient nur ber of States bad ratified the constitution, the Congress of the confederation resolved that the first Wednesday is January of the following year should be the day for ap pointing the Electors in the several States; the first Wed esday in February the day for the Electors to cast their votes for President, and the first Wednesday in March the day for the new Congress to commence proceedings m the city of New York, under the new constitution The appointed day—the 4th of March—came, but no que rum of either branch of Congress appeared. Adjourn ments took place from day to day until the 1st of April, when the House obtained a quorum, but it was the 6th of the same month before the Senate was permitted to thus legally convene. On that day—the 6th of April 1789—the electoral votes were opened and counted when George Washington and John Adams were declared to be the choice of the American people for the first President and Vice President of the United States. Four elections were held under the provisions of the constitution as originally framed, requiring a majority of the electoral votes for President, the per son receiving the next highest number of votes to be Vice President; but after the election in 1801 the constitution was amended so as to compel electors to vote for President and Vice President separately. By an act of Congress, passed in March, 1792, the first Wednesday in December was designated as the day for the meeting of the Electoral Colleges in the several States, and the second Wednesday in February succeeding every meeting of electors as the day for the opening and counting o the votes in the presence of Congress. From the time of the passage of this act they have continued to be counted on that day to the present period.

The first occasion that attracted attention to the ceremony was in 1797, on the election of John Adams by a very tight vote over Thomas Jefferson. The vote uncertainty existed regarding the final result, and the public doubt was not dissipated until Congress an-nounced its decision. The second was the election of 1801, when Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr received an equal vote. Each having 78 electoral votes, there was no decided choice in the Electoral College. On Wednesday, the 11th of February, in that year, the House of Reprenot till the following Tuesday, on the thirty-sixth ballot that Thomas Jefferson, who had received the votes of ter out of sixteen States, was declared to be the President Aaron Burr, of course, was then placed in the next high est position in the government. It was this election which led to the amending of the constitution so as to re quire electors to vote on a separate ballot for Vice Pre sident. The pext occasion was the election of 1825 when neither of the three candidates—Andrew Jackson John Quincy Adams, and William H. Crawford—received a majority of the electoral votes. Congress declared that no choice had been made, and on Wednesday February 9, 1825, the House of Representatives elected John Quincy Adams, President on the first ballot. John C. Calhoun had been chosen Vice President by a large popular majority. In 1837, neither of the candidates for Vice President having received a majority of the electoral votes, the Senate elected Richard M. Johnson, by a vote of 33 against 16 for Francis Granger.

When both houses met to count the votes cast for Buchanan and Fremont, in 1866, Mr. Lotcher objected to the reading of the vote of Wisconsin, because the elec-tors had not met on the day appointed by the constitution. The fact was, that in consequence of a severe sterm, which rendered the roads impassable, the Wis-consin Presidential electors were unable to reach the apital of their State on the 3d of December, as required by law, to vote for President and Vice President ; but they assembled on the 4th, and then went through the form.

The question raised was, shall the vote of Wisconsin be ruled out? Mr. Mason, who occupied the chair decided the objection out of order, and, after the count was completed, announced that Mr. Buchanan having received 174 votes, Fremont, 114—inciuding Wisconsin—and Fillmore 8, Mr. Buchanan was duly elected President. Great excitement ensued, appeals ing officer, who said his power was ended, the Senate re tired, and both houses debated the question in their re spective chambers. The vote of Wisconsin would no have changed the result of that election, but some legis lation was considered necessary, as a future occasion might arise on which the vote of a single State might, in a similar case, affect the validity of a whole election. On the following day a joint resolution declaring that the vote of Wisconsin was null, and ought not to have been included in the count of the electoral votes, was discuss-

To day both branches of Congress will assemble to count the votes cast at the late Presidential election. Every one anticipates the result; but much interest will be connected with that meeting, because it be the first time that Congress shall have had the opportunity of announcing to the country the elec-tion of a republican President and Vice President, and because the mournful fact will then, perhaps more than at an period since the election, be made vividly apparent, that six of the States have second from the Union, and the seats that should have been occupied by their Senators and members in the hall of the House Representatives at the counting of the votes will be vacant. The absence of the representatives of the se-ceded States, however, will not prevent the announcement by Congress that Lincoln and Hamlin are consti tutionally chosen President and Vice President; for while one portion of the constitution provides that "the President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Se nate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted," the fifth that "a majority of each house shall constitute a quorun to do businees," and more than a sufficient num constitute a quorum are remaining.

That paper probably did more than any other journal or man to bring about the nomi-nation of Mr. Lincoln and to sustain the doctrines of black republicanism. Now hear what the says:—

We have always doubted whether the opposition to the democracy in this constry could ever stick together long erough to be productive of any decesive action. If the slavery question is to be abandoned, the Lincoln dynasty will be as short lived as that of Harrison and Tyler, in be he of which cases the party died before the President. OBITUARY.

The death of Mosse B. Seixas, the youngest son of Benjamin M. Seixas, Esc., of this city, which occurred on the Slat of January list at Georgetown, South Carolina, while it has overwhelmed his parents and family with grief, has occasioned the sincerest feelings of regressaming a large circle of acquaintances, to whom he had endeered himself by his generous and mandy nature and his frank and amiable disposition. It is but a few weeks since, that he left his home with all the animation and ardent hopes of a youth of orgitsen, to join his brother in the South; and scarcely had be reached the place of his destination when he was seized with the sudden and fatal illness which speedlip summoned his devoted parents to the bedside of their darling boy, so soon to be claimed by "Him who gives and who taketh away." In fatal illness which speedily summoned his devoted parents to the bedside of their darling boy, so soon to be claimed by "Him who gives and who taketh away." In his last hours a fond mother's hand smoothed his pillow, a mother's voice cheered him until his spirit fied to tnose bright realms of bliss where sorrow and sufering enter not; and the same fond mother, in the performance of a sad and heartrending duly, accompanied his remains to the home from which he is now a greatly missed, that they may skeep beneath the sixes and soil of his nativity.

Mourn not the early called, for they are bless'd, whom the Almighty in His wisdom takes From this bas world, where ardent youth's beset With dire templation.

The fairest flowers in their earliest bloom are often nipp'd By an untimely frost; and so with man; E'en in the spring time of his life, while hope In rainbow hues the future paints, The summons comes whith we must all obey. The flower dearly loved droops, withers, dies, To bloom again in those sternal gardens where all is peace and everlasting joy. To bloom again in those eternar garcens where all is peace and overbasting joy.

Then mourn him not whom God in love has call But, like the patriarch of old, submit, And say, "No more the son we loved can come To us, but we shall go to him again, To dwell in love and happiness forever."
